Chemours Employee Johnny Wheatley Celebrates 50 Years of Service

Johnny Wheatley, of Benton County, celebrated the anniversary of 50 years as an employee at the Johnsonville site on Tuesday, December 7. Wheatley has worked in many different areas of the plant during his tenure including the control lab where he has worked since 1999. During the celebration, he was honored with the re-naming of the lab from "Plastics Lab" to "Wheatley Lab" and was also presented with a plaque and personalized lab coat.

Wheatley began working for DuPont following his service as a Special Forces Green Beret from 1968-1971 and has experienced many changes at the plant throughout his career, including the 2015 establishment of Chemours, formerly the Performance Chemical division of DuPont. While he has no plans to retire, when asked what makes him stick around, he said he really enjoys the people he works with and that working for the company has been good for him and his family. He believes that staying active and working is the key to his longevity, and if you know "Sweetly" as he is affectionally called, he has never slowed down.

"Johnny Wheatley's service to Chemours over the past 50 years demonstrates what a dedicated and valuable employee he is," stated Chemours New Johnsonville Plant Manager C.J. Hilton. "His commitment makes him a significant part of our team and we are happy he plans to remain part of our work family."

Wheatley is one of three employees to celebrate the achievement of 50 years of service to the New Johnsonville site.
